" # in user land with a library, one must have a def to call the library # instead of "missing lib" # For instance: # "fldate", # libgf # "stdio", # libm # "libc", # libm # "libm", # "libgf" # (Note that "libm" in the middle of the line is ok; you don't have to # keep those exact names at the end) # When we encounter the symbol in a library, first replace the old library # entry with the new one, then repeat as long as there is another package # which has that symbol as a dependency. # Here, we load a library "libc" because that contains "malloc". # We must keep "libc" first, even after the "libm" got replaced by the # library we have. That's because some other libraries will depend on # "libc" in addition to "libm". If we replaced "libm" first, we would # not know about those cases anymore. SELECT get_included_module(p.package) AS package, p.package_id, p.dependencies, p.libm, p.package, p.filename, p.name, p.reference, p.fldate FROM package_dependencies p WHERE p.package = $1 AND p.libm IS NOT NULL ORDER BY package_id DESC; --echo --echo # --echo # 2. Check that dependent packages get replaced SELECT p.package_id AS package_id, p.dependencies, p.libm, p.package, p.filename, p.name, p.reference, p.fldate 82157476af
